On 7/9/70, Captain FRANK BARBERS, Stevens Point, Wis. Outline Objectives Of The Coalition

STEVENS POINT We, of the Student Coalition feel the recent editorial that appeared in the Stevens Point Journal requires a reply. Our positions and objectives appear to have been largely misinterpreted and must be clarified.

Our first and most immediate objective is to unite high school students to enable self-education and community action. Self-education entails an end to apathy. We hope to make students aware and interested in issues from community to international importance. In this respect, we believe we will supplement the academic education we receive and better prepare students to become responsible citizens. We also feel that students and the community should be aware of the ways in which issues such as political oppression, the war in Indochina, racism and others affect all of our lives.

Another objective is to improve the educational system. This is logically one of our most important objectives since it has the most direct influence on us. This point was more fully elaborated upon in the first issue of our newspaper. Basically, we want to shift the emphasis of the school system to a learning experience rather than a diploma factory.

When the coalition was born in February—two months before the ROTC demonstrations in Stevens Point—the concept of a student newspaper seemed to be an effective means of working toward our objectives. Admittedly our journalistic talents are not polished or professional, and we are aware of the shortcomings of our first issue. Some writers in the paper did "rant and rave," but one must ask; how much interest would have been generated had they not?

Much criticism has been raised over the headlines, "Subvert Your Local High School—Show 'em What For," and several cartoons. We can only say, that in the heated emotionalism of the moment, it appears that many people did not recognize the satirical nature of the illustrations.

Also criticized was the High School Bill of Rights. These rights which "by some mysterious grace belong to the students" are nothing more than the fundamentals of the United States Constitution and Bill of Rights applied to our circumstances. As human beings and Americans we have been led to believe by "outside sources" that we too come under the jurisdiction of the Constitution and Bill of Rights.

In keeping with the Bill of Rights the coalition newspaper is an open means of freedom of speech and expression of ideas. Any responsible journalism, regardless of politics, will be accepted and printed.

The members of the coalition have been called "high school radicals." The coalition is and always has been an open organization. Political imbalance in the coalition is due in part of the fact that many channels of communication open to most groups are closed to us in the schools. For example, announcements over public address systems and permission to pass out leaflets have been denied in some schools.

Our meetings are open not only to all students but to the general community as well. To
